LOCATION

Bridge of Allan is a town in the Stirling council area in Scotland, just north of the city of Stirling. It lies on the Allan Water, a northern tributary of the River Forth, built largely on the well-wooded slopes of the Westerton and Airthrey estates, sheltered by the Ochil Hills from the north and east winds.

Most of the town is to the east of the river; the bridge is part of the A9, Scotland's longest road, while the railway line and the M9 pass to the west of the river. Bridge of Allan railway station is on the Edinburgh to Dunblane Line.

The subjects are located on the southern side of Henderson Street at its junction with Queens Lane. Henderson Street forms the main arterial road through the town leading to Stirling and as such benefits from a high level of passing trade.

The subjects are well located for office use being in the heart of Bridge of Allan.

DESCRIPTION

The subjects comprise a first floor office suite contained within a 3 storey building of traditional stone construction.

Internally the subjects provide 5 office rooms, kitchen and w.c. facilities including ensuite facilities with showers for two of the suites.

The suite is self contained with private pedestrian door access benefiting from lift access.

The suite benefits from parking spaces at the rear of the property with private entrance to the building.

The building has recently undergone extensive refurbishment to a high standard and is ready for immediate entry offering first class office accommodation in a highly sought after location.
