LOCATION

Bridge of Allan is a town in the Stirling council area in Scotland, just north of the city of Stirling. It lies on the Allan Water, a northern tributary of the River Forth, built largely on the wellwooded slopes of the Westerton and Airthrey estates, sheltered by the Ochil Hills from the north and east winds. Most of the town is to the east of the river; the bridge is part of the A9, Scotland's longest road, while the railway line and the M9 pass to the west of the river. Bridge of Allan railway station is on the Edinburgh to Dunblane Line.

The subjects are located on the northern side of Allanvale Road in close proximity to its junction with Henderson Street.

DESCRIPTION

The subjects form the lower ground floor of a traditional end terraced four storey property of stone construction.

The restaurant provides seating area incorporating a mixture of traditional table and chairs and more relaxed seating providing 40-50 covers. The floor is of solid wooden construction whilst the walls are exposed stone. The front serving area provides a bar with coffee machine, refrigeration and storage unit.

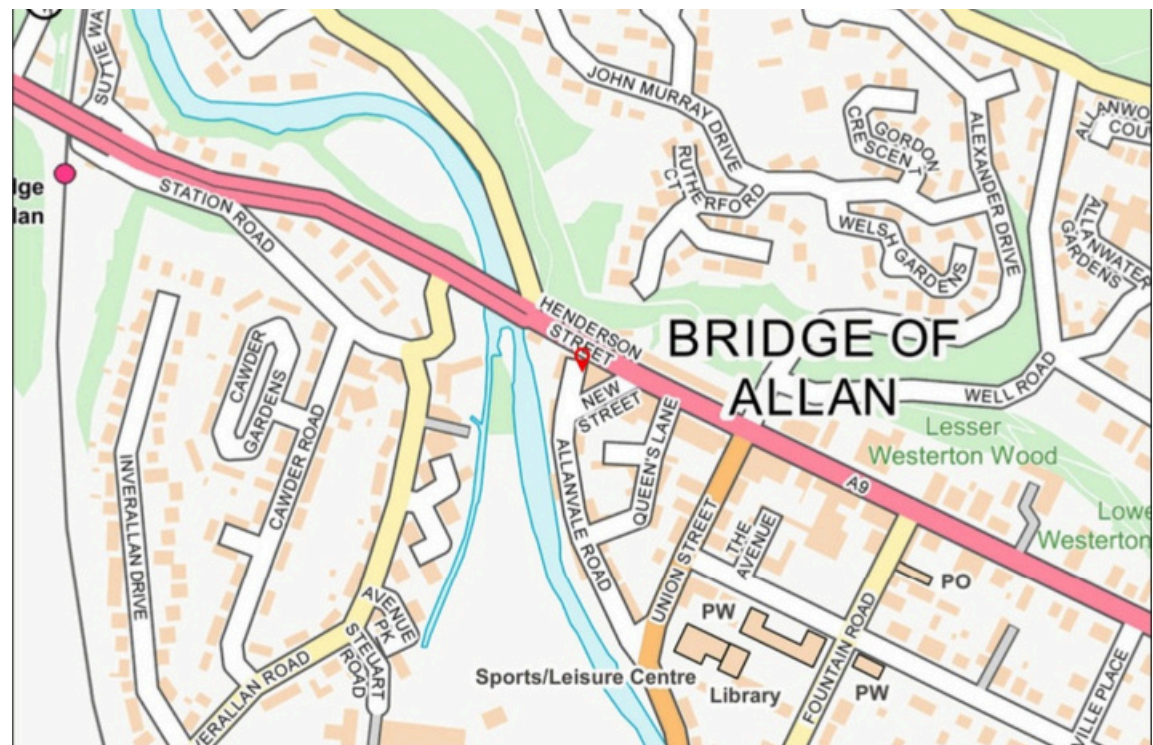

The kitchen area is fully equipped with stainless steel appliances, basins, extraction system and refrigeration.

There are three storerooms and a large cellar which provides 6 pumps, chiller and extractor.

There are separate male and female w.c.'s provided together with a disabled toilet.

PROPOSAL

Lease from £24,000 for a new FRI lease.
